Adapted from Susan Boyle, Lilac 2011
We had a dream……...

Move from

“ …lifting and transporting textual substance from one location, the library, to another, their teacher’s briefcases.”

To

“…searching, analyzing, evaluating, synthesizing, selecting, rejecting…”

Kleine 1987

Thinking about resources
Books

What are they:

A written or printed work of fiction or fact.

May be electronic.

Good for:

Clear overview.

Not so good for:

Up to date information.
Journal

What are they:

A regular publication containing articles on a particular academic subject.

Presents new research.

Good for:

Latest research, critically reviewed by experts.

Not so good for:

Broad overview of a subject.
Web page

What are they:

An information resource which can be easily created by anyone on any topic.

Electronic.

Good for:

Very up to date information.

Not so good for:

Accurate and reliable information.
Newspaper

What are they:

A regular publication containing current events, informative articles, diverse features and advertising.

May be electronic.

Good for:

Daily information.

Not so good for:

Balanced and well researched information.
Popular (trade) journal

What are they:

A regular publication containing new products plus information for a business sector.

Good for:

Latest product news.

Not so good for:

Detailed and objective reports.
Thinking about keywords
Your first piece of coursework for CCM2426 will be based on the Cornish Villages 4G trial.
